Team Newbie

When first approached by the likes of Allan and Cirina to do Dragon Boating, it seemed a crazy kind of sport to get involved in. But the opportunity to exert ourselves in competition while getting to know some of our work mates along with some other great people was just too tempting to pass up, and so our Dragon Boating season began.

To begin with we'd leave the trainings sore, wondering why anyone would choose to put themselves through this... But wonder we did and so we pressed on. And as time went by the trainings felt more natural, the pain didn't really go away but the purpose to all the effort became visible. So with crippled arms n all, we endured side by side with the more seasoned veterans, because we knew the purpose... To give our best, we wanted to win!

And now the season is at an end we feel good about our results, we faced off against some tough competitors but stood toe to toe with them and made them sweat. But what really made it stand out was doing it alongside great team mates, under the guide of a great coach. We were always made to feel at home with the team, we had a blast :-)

We even won some bling, something that says we were there and we rated!

But this is only the beginning... That was just our warmup!

MMM Most Memorable Moments

The commentator from the Tiger Beer Festival. "Have to wait for the officials to make the official announcement", and 'Environment Waikato pumping hard like a well oiled machine' Hopefully quoted correctly may need reference to video. -VC

If you could change something next year.....

Fining system for not coming to trainings without very good reason (will help with the drink up at the end of the season :) Wouldn't that be encouraging to increase commitment. -VC
